

Put Your Money to Work

Florida PRIME Yields vs. Fed Funds Rate

Sources: Federated Investors, Bloomberg

The announcement this week that the Federal Reserve raised interest rates by 25 basis points could spark another increase in yields for Florida PRIME. New assets invested in the Pool will be immediately invested in securities reflecting these higher yields, speeding up the impact of the rate increase on your working capital. When rates lifted off last December, these higher yields were quickly reflected in the Pool, beginning a trend that continued throughout 2016. Take advantage of this second rate hike and invest in Florida PRIME™ while yields are on the rise.

For additional information about Florida PRIME, please visit our website.